

WALKER CUP GOLF LEAN MEANS WITH CRITICISM ABROAD

British Critics Believe
There Will Not Be Sufficient Interest.

HENRY LEACH SPEAKS UP
Thinks America Presumptuous for Proffering Trophy for International Match.

By JOHN G. ANDERSON.

It was a cool August morning a number of years ago when a British golf critic and writer stepped from a taxi before the entrance of the exclusive Myopia Hunt Club at Hamilton, Mass., and started to walk toward the first tee not far distant. A voice called him and he was asked to join the chairman of the golf committee what he was doing on the links.

"You've got to have a guest card even if you only wish to walk over the course," he was told.

Whereupon Henry Leach of London, then one of the best known golf writers in the world, turned back and, after the usual delay, secured the necessary permit from a friend in Boston.

At that time there was more than a shade of sarcasm at the manner of treatment which he experienced, the same, by the way, which would have been meted out to any other golfer so trespassing on the club's property. And it was the anti-American feeling which had remained constant with Mr. Leach for seven or eight years were not caused, or at least started, by this incident.

In his book written soon after his return to England Mr. Leach speaks very pleasantly of the Myopia links as a golf course, but I know that there was and perhaps is a rankling. This undoubtedly showed itself at the time when Francis Outmit went across as the open champion of the United States at the championship of the Great Britain. In one of his preliminary stories the young American was listed as an overgrown caddy with clothes which did not add to his bearing. And when Mr. Leach wrote all the Americans were given not the ghost of a show for the title because the standard of play was considered to be much inferior to that of the rank and file of British amateur golfers. In this respect Mr. Leach was right, as he is on most occasions, but to Americans was blundered into which they did not relish very much.

America Presumptuous.

And now we are told by Mr. Leach that America is very presumptuous in proffering a cup for international competition and that if such a trophy were to be presented for play Great Britain should have been the one to start the thing. No one can deny that the present critic has great weight on his side, and yet there is no answer to the question as to why Great Britain hasn't started such an affair when there have been years and years of opportunity. Surely international competition has been long enough in the air.

As far back as 1911 there was a proposition put out by Horace Hutchinson, a former amateur champion of Great Britain and long recognized as a leader in golf affairs there, whereby a magnificent trophy was to be presented for a match between the United States and Great Britain. The trophy, by the way, was to be presented by a Scot who had made his home in America and a huge fortune as well, and there could have been no excuse about a lack of desire to present such a trophy from the hand of a man who did not have the true spirit of golf in his veins, as he was a member of the Royal and Ancient and a frequent visitor to Scotland.

I remember well hearing Mr. Hutchinson ask Mr. E. A. Lazenby, a former amateur title holder of Great Britain, the advice, and many others, including Sidney Fry, M. P. Pierre Deschamps, president of the Societe de Paris and La Boule Golf Club, and then added his own opinion that the proposition could not be made a success. It was ten years ago, and there was much more known about it abroad than there was here. Yet from that time to this everything which had been said about international matches has been repeated on this side of the water, and the culmination has come in the Walker trophy to be played for in September of this year.

Home Players Saving Money.

Mr. Leach says that Americans are saving thousands of pounds by having the first tournament played in this country. Well, it has been played somewhere and away not on a course which equals any in the British Isles. However, we are in accord with two of the suggestions which are made by Mr. Leach, namely, that the trophy should be believed there might be some change in the playing conditions that their voice should count, and, secondly, that it is asking too much for several nations to be the chief logical opponents. I believe that a school water worked out whereby there could be a survivor among the European nations which would travel to this country after the match, and then challenge the winner of this continent and Canada, for instance, before the final round.

If Great Britain should win a bit useless journeying for a Canadian and a team from the United States to travel six thousand miles to decide which side is the stronger when that could be done on this side of the water. Leaving out the matter of expense entirely, the project does not appear to me strongly in this specific provision. I feel confident that there would be a more wholehearted response if this change were made.

However, I regret the manner in which some of the foreign golf critics have received this international offer. Instead of boasting it to the skies or lauding the proffer they have thrown cold water and said that there will not be sufficient interest. I believe that the international nature of the trophy is a new youthful competitive spirit which seems to welcome the new order of things, and we predict that in due season the Davis cup will have its greatest rival in the Walker trophy.

U. S. G. A. Makes a Mistake.

I think that the Intercollegiate Golf Association has been honored by faculty of the U. S. G. A. There seems to be little good and sufficient reason for this step any more than the naming of a representative from the Golf Association of jewelers, or architects, or physicians, or lumbermen, or advertisers, or any of the many hundreds of organizations which stand in the same light. The college boy does not represent an association in the strict sense of the word. He belongs to no golf club or to a club which is not in the section where he attends school; he doesn't pay any particular attention to anything connected with the game except a long drive and a good score, and the one championship held each year meets the beginning and the end of the association's endeavors.

Foreign Athletes Are Invited to America

PHILADELPHIA, March 5.—Invitations have been sent to cricketers and many other sportsmen in England and France to compete at the second annual American Legion field day, to be held on Franklin Field June 4. It was announced today by Major R. R. Hogan, chairman of the committee in charge of the games. Should the invitation be accepted the foreigners would meet some of the greatest athletes in America, many of whom belong to the Legion, Major Hogan said.

It is hardly to be expected that eighteen or nineteen year old youths will be able to offer advice as to how to play golf, but the president of the M. G. A., Advertising Golf Interests or the president of a State organization. We believe that the M. G. A. has made in the inclusion of this body.

Special Despatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

New Brunswick, N. J., March 5.—With the selection of the resident coaching staff for the Yale football team made public this week and with the announcement of two additional old EM gridiron warriors to the graduate football committee Yale is further ahead in her football plans than at this time in any previous year. The new policy adopted by the football committee of laying out the campaign early and getting busy in the winter to prepare for the next fall's games is reaping results in that every Yale man, graduate or student, is talking and thinking football. This, according to Louis E. Stoddard, chairman, is going to have wholesome results. The new coaching staff of the committee in mapping out and carrying out a plan which is contrary to all Yale precedent, has made a hit.

This committee adopted the slogan, "Get Princeton and Harvard," and if the preparations covering a period of ten months do not result in putting Yale back on the football map it will not be because of lack of effort. The new staff to beat the Tigers and the Crimson and makes no effort to conceal it. The undergraduates and alumni are thoroughly worked over the winter of the last two years. The spirit of football, even at this early stage of the game, is in the air, and Yale men are unconsciously learning the last link in the familiar "Yale-Yale-Yale" song. "No hope for Princeton," or "Harvard," as the case might be.

Two Conferences Held.

Capt. Aldrich, Tad Jones and the football committee met twice this week, and sitting with the men were Charlie Taft, Charlie Comerford and Dr. Bull, the resident coaches named. The first was an active committee, this 1921 football body, and each is capable of giving good, sound football advice. Strength had been added to it through the appointment of Jack Owsley, head coach, and Red Murphy, who was captain in 1916 and was one of the best tackles Yale ever had. He was a prominent candidate for president of the university and he has a keen interest in Yale athletics than he. He is expected to spend considerable time in New Haven as a member of the committee.

Bill Lauder has conceived the idea of making a second baseman out of Thomas Murphy, and he hopes to develop him into a regular at that position before the season begins. He is fleet of foot and a fairly good man in the outfield, but by no means a world beater. Murphy always had good arm and his legs and speed around the base convulsed Lauder and Capt. Peters that he will do. The squad, twenty in number, leaves on March 23 for Macon, where eight games will be played with Southern colleges. Three days of work on the Quinipiac River has resulted in bringing the varsity crews, the first and second, along in good style. Guy Nickalls is making the most of the mild weather and, despite a death of experienced men, he feels encouraged over the crew prospects.

Changes have been made frequently in the personnel of the first two shells and will be continued to be made daily for some time to come. The first two boats for the greater part of the week have been sent this way:
